a voice from the south was published in 1892 by anna julia cooper an educator who was one of the first two african american women to be awarded a master s degree since then it has been recognized as one of the first works of black feminist theory setting forth a perspective that would be described as intersectional in contemporary terms cooper explores her own lived experience as an educated african american woman and advocates for the education of african american women as a necessary means of achieving racial equality however her marked emphasis on women s roles in the household has been critiqued by later theorists as a concession to the 19th century cult of domesticity or alternatively a strategic engagement with the dominant cultural view towards women in her time a voice from the south continues to be read and analyzed today for its pioneering role in african american female scholarship this book is part of the standard ebooks project which produces free public domain ebooks
